NCOM Report - Report August – Minnesota – By Frank Ernst – From ABATE of Minnesota Road Noise - (612) 801-2920 - NCOMLiaison@ABATEMN.org - I have been reporting on attempts by our Gov't to confiscate, take control of & make it illegal to wear patches of some clubs. This has been going on for a long while, decisions have been reached & appeals filed & we do not expect it to be over until the matter is heard in the nation's highest court. I began reporting on these actions as far back as 2010, at that time we were aware of one club from Calif in jeopardy of losing their trademark. Fast forward & now we have an additional club from Michigan fighting a similar battle. In addition to these conversations we have talked about motorcycle only check points funded by our Fed Gov't. The newest on this list of assaults is LE shooting 9 motorcyclists dead & wounding many more in Texas. I was having a conversation recently & the person I was speaking with commented on the coincidence of all these things happening in different parts of the nation.

I would like our readers to think back a little in the motorcycle rights fight. In 2002 Minnesota was if not the first, one of the first to pass the dead red laws allowing an escape from traffic lights that fail to recognize our vehicles. I think we have ten additional states now that have passed similar legislation since that time. About the same time we passed dead red laws we repealed our handle bar height restrictions, now we are seeing other states attempting & some succeeding to amend or repeal their handlebar height laws. Washington State passed Anti-Profiling legislation a couple of years ago & last year 4 additional states attempted to do the same thing.

The point I am making is we have learned by the actions of others. We have A.B.A.T.E., the Confederation of Clubs & other Motorcycle Rights Organizations meetings in many areas on a regular schedule. On a larger scale we have NCOM conventions & meetings as well as Meeting of the Minds & in our area Heartland Steam. All of this in an effort to help others learn how to have an effect on legislative issues that concerns us.

Why would we not understand that our Gov't & particularly LEO (Law Enforcement Officers) are having the same kind of meetings & conferences? Their focus at these conferences is to share info on how to keep us under control. One of the big concerns I have with this is the perception some people & specifically some LEO's have that most if not all motorcyclists are criminal. I see this perception overflowing & interfering with the regular activities of law abiding motorcyclists. I recently heard of an event in South Dakota that had LEO interference, they were told to restrict specific groups from attending their event. Closer to home I am aware of a group that has a run to raise money & awareness for a local facility, LE told the venue to not allow the motorcyclists to come to their facility. These were both events that have been going on for some time but LE is trying to shut them down. They are using the events of Waco as an excuse to regulate or shut down these & other activates. Perhaps LE should consider giving up some of their overtime dollars for a couple of days & staying away from these events. They may find there is less violence taking place without their participation.

I do understand that in the motorcycle community like in any cross section of people there may be some individuals that play outside of the rules. My belief is that this is the exception, & not all motorcyclists should be punished because of the actions of a few. I think the Blackstone's formulation has it right 'Better that ten guilty person's escape, then one innocent suffer'. This should include the practice of shooting people dead without the opportunity for a trial. But I will leave this for now.

Before I close I would like to congratulate Richard Lester, Richard will be inducted into the Sturgis Freedom Fighters Hall of Fame on Wed Aug 5th. Richard has been working to support the motorcycle community for over 3 decades & I consider it an honor to have had the opportunity to know & work with him. Congratulations Richard! How to Identify a Psychopath or Sociopath – July 8, 2015 – U.S.A. – By Ellen Hendriksen; www.ScientificAmerican.com - The terms “psychopath” & “sociopath” often get used interchangeably, but they’re not exactly the same. Regardless of semantics, here’s how to spot the heartless, charming evil of a psychopath or sociopath... Thanks to Savvy Psychologist listener Cindy Jossart of Webster City, Iowa for the idea for this week’s podcast. With darkness in their hearts, ice water in their veins, & snake-charming smiles on their faces, psychopaths make up anywhere from 0.6% to 4% of the population. This personality disorder affects men more frequently than women. It’s been documented in cultures the world over. Here’s a great icebreaker for your next cocktail party: the Native Alaskan peoples call psychopaths “kunlangeta.” The brain of a psychopath is different than yours or mine (unless you’re a psychopath). It has a smaller prefrontal cortex—the part that regulates behavior, impulse control, & planning—and a deformed amygdala, the seat of negative emotions like fear, guilt, & sadness. You can’t tell superficially who is a psychopath—so let’s get to know them. Here are 3 traits of psychopaths, plus the difference between a psychopath & a sociopath:

Psychopath Trait #1: Fearless Dominance: Let’s look at fearless dominance from an empathetic point of view (ironically, something psychopaths lack). Imagine total freedom from fear, anxiety, or guilt. You do whatever you want without the pesky hindrance of conscience, social consequences, authority figures, or worrying about the well-being of others. You know the rules of society; you just don’t care. You’re also a master at concealing your hard-hearted self-assurance. On the outside, you’re charming, outgoing, charismatic, & convincing—people like & admire you. You’re definitely not a loner. You thrive on power & control, which you get from these suckers who—willingly!—seem to take this thing called responsibility seriously. But they’re beneath you. These losers deserve to lose—they had it coming all along. You look out for #1. You also have no empathy so you’re free from dealing with the pain you inflict on others. You get this emotion thing intellectually, so you study it to learn how to act & what to say to get what you want, no matter what; you are a master manipulator. You’d be a first-rate cult leader, corporate raider, or dictator. Aptly described by Dr. Martha Stout, author of The Sociopath Next Door: The Ruthless Versus the Rest of Us, you are like a color-blind person looking at a traffic light. You know the topmost light is “red,” & you know what to do about it, but you have no understanding of what red truly is.

Psychopath Trait #2: Self-Centered Impulsivity: You do what you want, when you want. You need a lot of stimulation & get bored easily, so sometimes you’ll drive drunk, shoplift, start fights, humiliate coworkers, roofie that girl’s drink, or torture animals just for the fun of it. You’re also totally irresponsible. You don’t need to pay people back. You don’t go to work if you don’t feel like it. You might have a dishonorable discharge from the military. Finally, you’re impulsive. You’ll walk out of a job, break off relationships, drop out of school—which is for losers anyway—and have sex with many partners, even if you’re in a relationship. Why? Because you feel like it. But your impulsivity also means you’re more likely to die in a violent accident, commit impulsive suicide, or get killed by someone else.

Psychopath Trait #3: Low Autonomic Arousal: This means your physiology is different from non-psychopaths. Your resting heart rate is lower, your skin conductance is lower, & the beat-to-beat alterations in your heart rate are different from the rest of those losers. So, you’re cool as a cucumber, even when others react. When your partner is freaking out, this is when you do your best work. You may be part of the 20% of batterers for whom violence doesn’t involve rage at all. Instead, your heart rate goes down when you’re arguing with &, often, beating up your partners. The epitome was Hannibal Lechter: his heart rate never broke 85 even as he attacked a nurse and...Well, you know what happened next.

Psychopaths vs. Sociopaths: Researchers sometimes make a distinction between primary psychopaths-confirmed, bona fide psychopaths & secondary psychopaths, also called sociopaths. Sociopaths are cut from the same cloth as psychopaths, with 3 key differences:

- First, while true psychopaths are confident, social, & dominant, sociopaths are reserved & inhibited, sometimes loners. And while psychopaths are exempt from negative emotion, sociopaths are often hostile & do experience anxiety & rejection.
- Second, while psychopaths truly have no morals, sociopaths do have a sense of morality & a conscience, but their sense of right & wrong is skewed & doesn’t match society at large. Sociopaths are often crusaders or martyrs for a perceived cause; they see their depraved acts as necessary. So antagonistic, withdrawn Tim McVeigh is a good example.
- The third, oversimplified, difference is that psychopaths are born, while sociopaths are made, often through extreme childhood adversity & exposure to violence. But it’s not as simple as just nature or nurture—the truth lies somewhere in a scramble of genetics, neurology, & environment.

Unlike psychopathy, sociopathy can even be acquired: dementia or a head injury can do the trick. For example, think of Phineas Gage from your Psych 101 class. He was an easygoing construction foreman with lots of friends until, in 1848, a railroad explosion sent a 13-pound tamping rod into Gage’s eye & out the top of his head. Miraculously, he survived, but even as he physically healed, he became “fitful, irreverent, & grossly profane, showing little deference for his fellows.” He was also “impatient & obstinate, yet capricious & vacillating, unable to settle on any of the plans he devised for future action.” Basically, this was the 1840s version of calling him a stubborn, foulmouthed, flaky a--hole with mood swings—if not true acquired sociopathy, at least a close cousin.

To wrap up, I’ll leave you with the best example of psychopathy I’ve ever seen. He’s not a serial killer, evil CEO, or maniacal despot—he’s Eric Cartman from South Park. Cartman is a genuine psychopath. Indeed, making chili out of Scott Tenorman’s parents is the tip of his horrific iceberg. Here’s a link to South Park clips that prove Cartman is a psychopath (plus more about Phineas Gage). That’s all for this week. Or maybe I should say that’s enough for this week. And finally, thanks to you, savvy listeners, for getting the Savvy Psychologist to the 6-month mark. This show wouldn’t happen without you!

Waco's Worthy Wives & Widows – July 3, 2015 – Texas – By Amy Irene White; www.AmyIreneWhite.com - The Bible talks about taking care of the worthy widows... The Bandidos & others have taken this to heart when it comes to all the wives whose husbands were shot or jailed in the Waco Biker Slaughter at Twin Peaks. All over Texas bikers are helping each other cope with what went on that day. From T-Shirts sales totaling hundreds of dollars paying utilities & bonds to groceries & cell phones being collected, the true giving nature of bikers shines through the lies & jack-assery of the cops. Visiting with these amazing ladies is like being surrounded by señoritas & southern belles. I mourn the fact that the media never reached out & found these gorgeous creatures to interview, never showed America the real people being railroaded by lies & deceit. It's funny to me all the 'Christians' who talk bad about these folks when in reality they are the ones who are doing what the Bible says. Taking care of your Brother's wives & children.

More Waco - July 8, 2015 - Texas - By www.AgingRebel.com - The Waco story is shattering into a thousand shards like a startled murder of crows. In the last few days: Scimitars MC member Matt Clendennen withdrew his Fed civil right lawsuit against the city of Waco, McLennan County, TX, arresting officer Manuel Chavez & McLennan County District Atty Abel Reyna. Clendennen's Atty, Clint Broden, explained that there were so many officials he wanted to sue, like Waco Police Chief Brent Stroman, that he thought the best thing would probably be to start over with a blank page. "It certainly has nothing to do with the merits of the lawsuit," Broden told Tommy Witherspoon of the Waco Tribune-Herald. "We just need to add defendants, which we will do at a later date."

Rodriguez Suit: Meanwhile the widow of Jesus Delgado "Mohawk" Rodriguez, a former Marine & Vietnam Vet who was killed as the gun fight commenced shortly after he exited his car, has filed a lawsuit in Dallas County's 192nd District Court against the Twin Peaks Restaurant. Formally, the defendants are the owners of the former Twin Peaks franchise, the Chalak Mitra Group, LLC; Peaktastic Beverage, LLC; Front Burner Restaurants Group, LLC; & Twin Peaks Restaurant Investment Group. The same defendants are being sued by the neighboring Don Carlos Restaurant. The Rodriguez suit alleges that Rodriguez would still be alive if the Twin Peaks had not held "Bike Nights" & allowed the Confederation of Clubs to meet at the restaurant the day 9 men were killed & 18 were wounded in the worst incidence of biker violence in American History. The Waco police have taken pains to portray the Texas Confederation of Clubs as a quasi-criminal group. Widely quoted biker authority Steve Cook, who was in Waco at the time of the Twin Peaks massacre, told television station KXXV that he had, "seen an influx of gang members that are also a part of MCs & club confederations," whatever that meant. Cook also told the television station, "We do a considerable amount of talking about these confederations & coalitions... & try to make them understand a little bit the motives behind these is other than what they advertise." Cook, who recently appeared in a reality style drama called Outlaw Country said biker violence is a growing world problem. "It's rampant," Cook claimed. "They're spreading all across the country, all over the world for that matter.... You're either going to pay attention to these guys or you're going to ignore them."

Two Million Bikers: Finally, today Lana Shadwick of Breitbart Texas reported that John Bostick, a representative for the Facebook page "2 Million Bikers To DC," has sent "Cease & Desist letters" to Waco Police Chief Brent Stroman, Justice of the Peace Walter P. Peterson, & Waco Police Sergeant Patrick Swanton. The point of the letters, other than to use the Waco tragedy to publicize the Facebook page, is not clear. Bostick accuses the 3 men of assaulting "the reputation of the average motorcycle enthusiast." Bostick demands the 3 men "provide us with prompt written assurance that you will cease & desist from further defamation of Motorcycle Riders' character & reputation.... In the event you fail to meet this demand, please be advised that Motorcycle Riders in a class action joint effort will pursue all available legal remedies, including monetary damages, injunctive relief, & an order that you pay court costs & Atty's fees." Two Million Bikers To DC is threatening a "Bikers Strike Back" rally in Waco on July 18.

Death investigation uncovers marijuana grow operation in Apache County - July 8, 2015 – Arizona - By Catherine Holland; www.MyFoxAL.com - Three people believed to be members or associates of the Hells Angels MC are facing various drug & weapons charges after a death investigation uncovered a marijuana grow operation. This started in the early morning hours of June 28 when the Apache County Sheriff's Office received a call regarding a medical emergency in a remote area of western Apache County near the community of Hunt. When deputies & EMS workers arrived, they found a woman in her 60s dead. While on the scene, deputies spotted "numerous marijuana plants growing on the property." The Apache County Drug Task Force, the Navajo County Drug Task Force & the Arizona Dept of Safety State Gang Task Force/FBI Safe Streets Task Force were all called in. By the time officers completed their search, they had seized 60 marijuana plants, 11 firearms, a stolen Polaris Razor, & 3 grams of meth. Janice Rudy-Martinez, Howard Weisbrod & Andres Ospina, all of whom are believed to have ties to the Hells Angels, were arrested. "This is a prime example of the outstanding collaboration of LE in this region of the state to address complex criminal organizations operating within Navajo & Apache Counties," ACSO Commander Lance Spivey said. ACSO & DPS are working with the ATF on the investigation. Hunt is located about 4 hours northeast of Phoenix.

Idiot Sighting: The spotlight on the corner buzzes when it's safe to cross the street. I was crossing with an intellectually challenged co-worker of mine. She asked if I knew what the buzzer was for. I explained that it signals blind people when the light is red. Appalled, she responded, 'What on Earth are blind people doing driving?!' She was a probation officer in Wichita, KS

Idiot Sighting: At a good-bye luncheon for an old & dear co-worker who was leaving the company due to 'downsizing,' our manager commented cheerfully, 'This is fun. We should do this more often.' Not another word was spoken. We all just looked at each other with that deer-in-the-headlights stare. This was a lunch at Texas Instruments.

Family of slain Texas biker sues restaurant for negligence -

July 8, 2015 – Texas – By Emily Schmall, Associated Press; www.SFgate.com - The family of a biker slain in a shootout outside a Waco restaurant is suing the restaurant's parent company for negligence, according to a lawsuit filed Wed in Dallas County. Twin Peaks recklessly hosted a meeting of MCs May 17 after police warned of tensions between 2 biker gangs, according to the suit filed by the widow of Jesus Delgado Rodriguez, who is seeking unspecified damages & a jury trial. Rodriguez, who lived in New Braunfels, was among 9 bikers killed in the shootout that authorities say stemmed from an apparent confrontation between the Cossacks & Bandidos, both classified as gangs by the Texas Dept of Public Safety. Eighteen others were injured, & 177 people were arrested & held on $1 million bails, on charges of engaging in organized criminal activity. It remains unclear who fired the bullets that struck the 9 who died; the results of autopsies & ballistic analyses have not been made public. All but 4 of those arrested have been released, mostly on reduced bonds, & there has been no indictment. Rodriguez was a decorated Vietnam War veteran with no criminal history. The 65-year-old man known as Mohawk died from gunshot wounds to the head & torso, according to a preliminary autopsy report. Rodriguez's death was "something that shouldn't have happened," his widow, Mary Rodriguez, told The AP. "I think the police should have stopped it," she said. Waco police became aware of rising tensions between the Cossacks & the Bandidos in March, according to spokesman Sgt. Patrick Swanton. Authorities confronted Twin Peaks' management with concerns about the restaurant hosting a meeting of the Confederation Of Clubs & Independents, a coalition of MCs that advocates rider safety, but Twin Peaks failed to cancel the event, according to the lawsuit. On the date of the event, police attempted to enter the restaurant, but were blocked by management. State & local authorities then occupied positions outside the restaurant, including on the rooftop of a neighboring restaurant, Don Carlos, the lawsuit said. Don Carlos filed a lawsuit in May, seeking at least $1 million to compensate for lost profits & property damage. Before being thrust into the spotlight by the shootings in Waco, the Dallas-based Twin Peaks restaurant chain spent 10 years growing its brand nationally as "the ultimate sports lodge." The Round Rock & South Austin locations are operated under a different franchise than the Waco restaurant, which had its franchise agreement revoked by Twin Peaks' national corporation.

CMPD identify 2 suspects in 1979 murders of 5 people -

July 8, 2015 - North Carolina - By Tony Burbeck; www.WCNC.com - Suspects named in 36-year-old murder mystery... One of Charlotte's biggest & oldest murder mysteries is now solved.

Police on Wed announced the suspects responsible for the murders of 5 people, including members of the Outlaws motorcycle gang, on July 4, 1979, at a MC house on Allen Road South. Those suspects are identified as Gregory Scott Lindaman & Randy Allen Pigg, both of whom are deceased. It's known locally as the Fourth of July massacre. The victims were shot as they slept with a handgun & rifle. There were 29 shots fired, according to police. Found dead inside the clubhouse were William Allen, William Droneburg, Leonard Henderson, Randall Feazall & Bridgette Benfield. Benfield was 17. Droneburg & Henderson were Outlaw motorcycle gang members at the time, & Allen was in the process of becoming a member, police said. Feazall & Benfield were not part of the gang. "They were quite literally wrong place, wrong time," said CMPD Major Cam Selvey. Lindaman & Pigg were not in a rival gang, police said, but knew members of the Outlaws. Police say the motive behind the murders was Lindaman or Pigg had an ongoing argument with one of the victims, but they didn't say which one or what it was about. "These were bad people," Selvey said about Lindaman & Pigg. At the time, both had rap sheets which included violence. Lindaman was arrested in Calif on an unrelated murder charge in Mecklenburg County & was interviewed about the motorcycle gang club murders, but never charged. Pigg was also questioned but not charged. Police say the big difference between now & 36 years ago is people with information about the murders are no longer afraid to talk about it, especially after both suspects died. "We got enough to paint the whole picture. It put us in a position to feel very confident that we have probable cause," Selvey said. He added if Lindaman & Pigg were alive today, they would both be charged with multiple murders & hauled to jail. Neighbors including Keith Smith, who works on Allen Road South, remember the murders well. "That kind of thing didn't happen that much in the 1970s around here," he said. Police have notified victims' relatives. "I'm sure relatives of the killed are glad to know it's solved," said Bill Harris, who owns a business across the street where from the murder site. Police say the case was never closed & persistence from investigators finally paid off. The case is now officially cleared due to the deaths of the offenders.

Senior Sex: A husband leans over & asks his wife, "Do you remember the first time we made love together over fifty years ago? We went behind the village tavern where you leaned against the back fence & I made love to you." Yes, she says, "I remember it well." OK, he says, "How about taking a stroll around there again & we can do it for old time's sake?" "Oh Jim, you old devil, that sounds like a crazy, but good idea!" A police officer sitting in the next booth heard their conversation and, having a chuckle to himself, he thinks to himself, I've got to see these 2 old-timers having sex against a fence. I'll just keep an eye on them so there's no trouble. So he follows them. The elderly couple walks haltingly along, leaning on each other for support aided by walking sticks. Finally, they get to the back of the tavern & make their way to the fence. The old lady lifts her skirt & the old man drops his trousers. As she leans against the fence, the old man moves in... Then suddenly they erupt into the most furious sex that the policeman has ever seen. This goes on for about ten minutes while both are making loud noises & moaning & screaming. Finally, they both collapse, panting on the ground. The policeman is amazed. He thinks he has learned something about life & old age that he didn't know. After about half an hour of lying on the ground recovering, the old couple struggle to their feet & put their clothes back on. The policeman, is still watching & thinks to himself, this is truly amazing, I've got to ask them what their secret is. So, as the couple passes, he says to them, "Excuse me, but that was something else. You must've had a fantastic sex life together. Is there some sort of secret to this?" Shaking, the old man is barely able to reply, Fifty years ago that wasn't an electric fence."

Idiot Sighting: When my husband & I arrived at an automobile dealership to pick up our car, we were told the Keys had been locked in it. We went to the service Dept & found a mechanic working feverishly to unlock the driver side door. As I watched from the passenger side, I instinctively tried the door handle & discovered that it was unlocked. 'Hey,' I announced to the technician, 'it's open!' His reply: 'I know, I already got that side.' This was at the Ford dealership in Canton, MS

Justice Waco Style Y'All - July 9, 2015 – Texas – By the Aging Rebel; www.AgingRebel.com - The grotesque harlequinade of justice strutting & preening in Waco has reached a jaw dropping low. One of the Waco police “investigators” of the Twin Peaks Massacre has been appointed foreman of the grand jury that will decide which of the 177 people accused of murder will be indicted & have to stand trial. James Head, photo above, will lead the panel of 12 jurors & 2 alternates that will also consider whether police acted legally when they fired into a crowd of motorcycle enthusiasts who had assembled to eat lunch & talk politics at the Twin Peaks restaurant in Waco on May 17. Nine people died & 18 were wounded. The day after the massacre, Police spokesman W. Patrick Swanton said 192 people had been “detained.” On June 12, Waco Police Chief Brent Stroman said 239 people had been “detained.” An unknown number of those detainees were transported to the Waco Convention Center. That is where Head interviewed an unknown number of those detainees on May 17 & helped decide who was naughty & who was nice. The men & women arrested in the aftermath of the Twin Peaks massacre were illegally ordered held by a caricatured justice of the peace named W.H. “Pete” Peterson. Peterson based his decision on false statements made by Waco detective Manuel Chavez.

A Little History: Head’s appointment is worse than an obvious conflict of interest. It also turns the whole point of a grand jury inside out. Grand juries in the English speaking world have protected free men from reckless accusations since the year 978. The “right” to a grand jury is specified in the first sentence of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution which reads “No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury.” Texas has now transformed the core meaning of a grand jury from “protector” to “accessory after the fact.” In United States v. Mandujano Justice Warren Burger, who was hardly a bleeding heart liberal, wrote, “The grand jury is an integral part of our constitutional heritage which was brought to this country with the common law. The Framers, most of them trained in the English law & traditions, accepted the grand jury as a basic guarantee of individual liberty; notwithstanding periodic criticism, much of which is superficial, overlooking relevant history, the grand jury continues to function as a barrier to reckless or unfounded charges...Its historic office has been to provide a shield against arbitrary or oppressive action, by insuring that serious criminal accusations will be brought only upon the considered judgment of a representative body of citizens acting under oath & under judicial instruction & guidance.” In a recent case that became notorious after the Houston Chronicle’s Lisa Falkenberg took a long look at it last year, a Houston police officer named James Koterak headed a grand jury that indicted Alfred Dewayne Brown for the murder of Houston Police Officer Charles R. Clark. University of Houston law professor David R. Dow told Falkenberg that the appointment of Koterak to the grand jury “would scream conflict of interest to nearly all reasonable people.” Nevertheless, there are no state or Fed laws that address conflicts of interest for grand jurors. Head’s appointment is perfectly legal. “That’s the way it turned out,” State District Judge Ralph Strother told the Waco Tribune-Herald’s Tommy Witherspoon. “There was nothing to prevent the detective from being a qualified member of the grand jury, just like there is nothing to prevent him from being a qualified juror. If there is nothing that challenges his impartiality, he is qualified. We have lawmen who get on jury panels all the time. Who is better qualified in criminal law than somebody who practices it all the time?” McLennan County District Atty Abelino “Abel” Reyna told Witherspoon “That’s the system. He was chosen totally at random, like the law says.”

What’s That Smell: Dallas Atty Clint Broden, who is representing Scimitar MC member Matt Clendennen in the Twin Peaks case, thinks the system stinks. This morning in a supplement to a Writ of Mandamus addressed to the Court of Appeals for the Tenth District of Texas Broden wrote, “There is a noxious odor surrounding the investigation by the Waco Police & the McLennan County District Atty’s Office with regard to the ‘Twin Peaks Shooting’ & the wholesale arrest of 177 motorcyclists. This odor continues to waft & intensify with Detective Head serving as the grand jury foreperson over the investigation.” Broden & Clendennen are both restrained from commenting on the case by a gag order so Broden has been compelled to communicate with the press & the public at large by way of written requests to the court for rulings. “Clendennen is unable to respond to Judge Strother’s comments & point out that, even if possibly lawful, Detective Head’s participation in the grand jury process makes any grand jury decision unworthy of public confidence & that Detective Head should recuse himself from consideration of the motorcyclists cases,” Broden wrote to the world in this morning’s motion. “Indeed, it would be as if a relative of the defendant was the foreperson of the grand jury.” Broden may be shouting into a storm. So far just about every cop, prosecutor & judge in Waco has made it clear they don’t need no stinking “public confidence.”

Why the FBI Wants “Special Access” to Your Smartphone – July 9, 2015-USA - Why security experts warn that this is a terrible idea. By Larry Greenemeier; www.ScientificAmerican.com - Yesterday, FBI Director James Comey told Congress that the Fed Gov’t was increasingly concerned about the widespread use of data encryption in consumer technology, implying—although not explicitly demanding—that tech companies give LE easier access to cryptographically scrambled customer data. Comey’s testimony came one day after some of the world’s top cybersecurity experts & computer scientists issued a report arguing that the Gov’t’s call for special access to encrypted information is technically unfeasible & unworkably vague. LE officials need to get specific about what they want, the report’s authors argued, instead of simply waving their hands & hoping for a technological unicorn that gives them on-demand access to personal info while also protecting user privacy & securing data. And this is where the debate gets complicated. Here’s what each side wants & what might happen next: What is FBI director Comey asking for? Comey called for a “front-door” approach to customer data access in an October 2014 speech but he was unclear about how this might work outside of a nebulous call for tech companies to build “intercept solutions” into their products. National Security Agency (NSA) Director Michael Rogers proposed something a bit more concrete in April when he suggested that technology companies be required to create a digital key that could open any smartphone or other locked device, but dividing that key into pieces so it could not be used unilaterally. The Center for Democracy & Technology quickly shot down the split-key proposal as impractical. In his written statement before the Senate Judiciary Committee, Comey was careful to avoid asking companies to allow surreptitious “backdoor” access to customer data & communications. Documents leaked by former NSA contractor Edward Snowden in 2013 indicated that his former agency had done this, for example, by deliberately weakening encryption standards issued by the National Institute of Standards & Technology. The backlash against the Gov'ts alleged tampering with encryption standards & Gov't demands for customer data has created a growing rift between Silicon Valley companies & Washington, D.C.

Why does the Gov't say it should have this capability? Fed L.E. officials are concerned that criminals & terrorists will go "dark" by hiding their communications in encrypted e-mails & smartphones. Newer versions of the Apple iOS & Google Android mobile operating systems have emphasized encryption, to the point where company executives have said they would be unable to unlock customer data for LE even if ordered to do so. "With sophisticated encryption, there might be no solution [for LE], leaving the Gov't at a dead end—all in the name of privacy & network security," Comey said in Oct. Others in LE have taken even more extreme positions. "Apple will become the phone of choice for the pedophile," John Escalante, chief of detectives for the Chicago P.D., told The Washington Post in Sept. New York City District Atty Cyrus Vance, who likewise testified before the Judiciary Committee on Wed, was more specific in his objection to device encryption. In his written testimony, he stated that asking his office to investigate the more than 100,000 criminal cases they handle each year without smartphone data is to "fight crime with one hand tied behind our backs." Following the hearing, Wired reported that the NYCDA's office has since September encountered 74 iPhones whose full-disk encryption locked out a LE investigation. Vance later singled out Apple during his testimony for having a double standard with regard to its encryption policy. The company allows its customers to have sole possession of the decryption key for gadgets running iOS 8. Meanwhile, Apple does have the ability to decrypt customer data stored in the company's iCloud storage service if ordered to do so.

The FBI does need to intercept communications from time to time. Doesn't Comey have a point? Security experts have criticized LEOs for overstating the need for access. "It's all bluster," security expert Bruce Schneier wrote on his blog in October. Schneier, one of 15 co-authors of the new report by Massachusetts Institute of Technology's Computer Science & Artificial Intelligence Laboratory, added, "Of the 3,576 major offenses for which warrants were granted for communications interception in 2013, exactly one involved kidnapping. And, more importantly, there's no evidence that encryption hampers criminal investigations in any serious way. In 2013 encryption foiled the police 9 times, up from 4 in 2012—and the investigations proceeded in some other way."

What technical objections do security experts have to "special access"? CSAIL issued its 34-page report yesterday—you can find it here. It highlights several reasons why special access would create more problems than it would solve. The security researchers interpret Comey's comments to mean tech companies should create a cryptographic key escrow—in other words, a stored digital skeleton key—that LE could use to unlock encrypted information for use in criminal or terrorism investigations. But any cryptographic key created for LE would become a major target for hackers, would be difficult to secure & would discourage newer security practices such as "forward secrecy," in which decryption keys are deleted immediately after use & new keys are created for each subsequent transaction. A small but growing number of sites—including Google, Twitter, the Wikimedia Foundation & Facebook—have over the past few years begun using forward secrecy to secure transactions & data.

Is there any way to create special access that would make everyone happy? The authors of the report argue that any effort to create front doors for LE would also make software & devices much more complex, difficult to secure & expensive for tech companies to maintain.

What is the Gov't's track record for protecting sensitive data? Not good. Last year alone the Gov't reported successful hacks into unclassified White House, State & Defense Dept e-mail systems. The security researchers, led by Daniel Weitzner, director of M.I.T.'s Cybersecurity & Internet Policy Research Initiative & a former deputy chief technology officer at the White House, specifically cite the recent hack of the U.S. Office of Personnel Management to illustrate the harm that can arise when many organizations entrust private information to a single institution for safekeeping. In the case of OPM, numerous Fed agencies lost sensitive data because the office had insecure infrastructure.

Is there any precedent for what the Gov't is asking to do? The current debate must seem like déjà vu for many of the report's authors, many of whom in 1997 opposed a Clinton administration proposal that sought to require information & communication services to engineer their products to guarantee LE access to all data. The White House ultimately abandoned its push to have tech companies install what came to be known as the Clipper chip. The plan behind Clipper was to have all encryption systems retain a copy of keys necessary to decrypt information entrusted to a third party who would turn over the keys to LE on proper legal authorization.

What was the case against Clipper? The researchers at the time determined it was not possible to create the technology that Clipper proposed—a master key the Gov't could use to access large numbers of encrypted communications. Nor was there any consensus over who would serve as the trusted third-party that would hand over the master key when the Gov't secured a court order to use it.

What happens next? The FBI's Comey insisted Wed he was not asking to expand the Gov't's surveillance authority; rather, his goal was to ensure that LE can continue to gather electronic information & evidence from emerging technologies when needed. The security researchers say Comey & his colleagues should be as specific as possible about what they need & then engage cybersecurity experts & lawmakers to come up with an approach that takes into account both data security & user privacy. Now that both sides have spoken publicly, we will probably see some direct dialogue between them.

Idiot Sighting: My daughter & I went through the McDonald's take-out window & I gave the clerk a $5 bill. Our total was $4.25, so I also handed her a quarter. She said, 'you gave me too much money.' I said, 'Yes I know, but this way you can just give me a dollar bill back. She sighed & went to get the manager, who asked me to repeat my request. I did so, & he handed me back the quarter, & said 'We're sorry but we could not do that kind of thing.' The clerk then proceeded to give me back $1 & 75 cents in change. Do not confuse the clerks at McD's.

Idiot Sighting: I handed the teller at my bank a withdrawal slip for $400.00... I said "May I have large bills, please". She looked at me & said "I'm sorry sir, all the bills are the same size." When I got up off the floor I explained it to her.

Encryption backdoors for cops are unworkable, will put internet security at risk, warn experts - July 8, 2015 – U.S.A. - By Steve Ranger; www.zdnet.com - Demands for access to encrypted communications raise huge technical & ethical questions, according to security researchers... Demands by police & intelligence services for secret backdoors into the encrypted communications of internet users would have a disastrous effect on the web, security experts have warned. LE chiefs have been warning that the trend towards using strong encryption is making it much harder for them to disrupt criminal plots or investigate crimes because they cannot eavesdrop on online conversations anymore. Only this week the Dir of the FBI James Comey warned: "There is simply no doubt that bad people can communicate with impunity in a world of universal strong encryption." Politicians & police chiefs on both sides of the Atlantic have been calling for some capability to be able to read emails, texts, & other messages, even if they have been encrypted. But now a group of security experts have warned that such plans would risk undermining the security of the internet itself. The group of more than a dozen security experts including professor of security engineering at the Univ of Cambridge Ross Anderson, cryptographer Whitfield Diffie, & Ronald Rivest - the 'R' in the RSA public-key cryptosystem - have put together a report looking at some of the issues involved. "These proposals are unworkable in practice, raise enormous legal & ethical questions, & would undo progress on security at a time when internet vulnerabilities are causing extreme economic harm," they warn. The group said there are 3 main problems with giving LE backdoor access to strong encryption systems. First, it would force a U-turn from security best practices such as the use of forward secrecy, whereby decryption keys are deleted immediately after use. This means stealing the encryption key used by a communications server would not compromise other messages.

Obama to Push U.S. Sentencing Change Backed by Koch Billionaires – July 11, 2015 – U.S.A. – By Justin Sink; www.MSN.com - The White House is preparing to seize advantage of bipartisan concern over the burgeoning U.S. prison population & push for legislation that would reduce Fed sentences for nonviolent crimes. Pres Barack Obama is expected to argue for revamping U.S. sentencing guidelines during a speech to the NAACP annual convention on Tue in Philadelphia. Top officials from the Justice Dept, including Deputy Atty General Sally Yates, have recently met with members of Congress to express support for sentencing reform legislation. Key lawmakers from both parties have been invited to the White House next week to discuss strategy. "Engagement with the Pres has been lacking for the past 6 years, but this is one topic where it has been refreshingly bipartisan," Jason Chaffetz, the Utah Republican who heads the House Oversight Committee, said in a phone interview. Obama came to office promising to reduce the number of Americans imprisoned for nonviolent drug offenses, & in 2010 signed a law reducing disparities in sentences for possession of crack & powder cocaine. Some Republicans & police organizations criticized the moves as too lenient, but now a bipartisan coalition that includes Obama's chief political antagonists, billionaires Charles & David Koch, have joined him to support relaxing Fed sentencing guidelines.

Mass Incarceration: More than 2.2 million adults are imprisoned in the U.S., the most in the world, & the incarceration rate is between 5 & 10 times higher than in Western European countries, according to the National Research Council. Lawmakers in both parties have been raising alarms about the cost of mass incarceration to taxpayers & to minority communities that are disproportionately the source of prisoners. About 60% of all prisoners are black or Hispanic, & black men under age 35 who did not finish high school are more likely to be behind bars than to hold a job, according to the research council. More than 100,000 people are currently in Fed prison for drug-related crimes, at a cost of about $30,000 per person each year, the United States Sentencing Commission said in a May report. That price tag has drawn a cadre of fiscally-conservative Republicans to join with Democrats in a bid to overhaul sentencing. Success would mean a rare bipartisan legislative victory for Obama & a concrete policy achievement to match recent speeches urging the nation to focus on racial & criminal-justice issues.

Unusual Allies: Chaffetz said he was optimistic that a package of bills would advance because of a diverse coalition of supporters lined up behind it. The Pres dubbed the legislation "a big sack of potatoes" in a meeting with lawmakers in Feb, Chaffetz said. The composition of the legislation isn't final. The Koch brothers, billionaire Republican donors, support a bill introduced last month by Representatives Jim Sensenbrenner, a Wisconsin Republican, & Bobby Scott, a Virginia Democrat, that would encourage probation rather than imprisonment for relatively minor, non-violent offenses & improve parole programs in order to reduce recidivism. The Sensenbrenner-Scott bill is modeled on state efforts to reduce incarceration. While the Fed prison population has grown 15% in the last decade, state prisons hold 4% fewer people, according to Sensenbrenner's office. 32 states have saved a cumulative $4.6 billion in the past 5 years from reduced crime & imprisonment, his office said in a report.

Studying Sentencing: The legislation "is the result of years of efforts to identify, compile & bring to the national level the best, evidence-based practices in criminal justice reform,” Representative Elijah Cummings, a Maryland Democrat said in a statement. Bob Goodlatte, the Republican chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, held a meeting in late June to listen to proposals from lawmakers in both parties. And Chaffetz, who described Republican leadership in the House as “very optimistic & encouraging,” scheduled hearings on the issue by his committee for July 14 & 15. “I don’t normally do 2 days of hearings, we’re giving it that much attention,” Chaffetz said. “So it has more momentum than anybody realizes.” There is a significant obstacle on the other side of the Capitol: Senator Chuck Grassley, the Iowa Republican who chairs his chamber’s Judiciary Committee.

Winning Grassley: An effort in Feb to advance legislation that included across-the-board reductions in minimum mandatory sentences met with resistance from Grassley, who wouldn’t put it to a vote in his committee. But supporters of the House legislation have reason for optimism: last month, Grassley announced he would work on a compromise in the Senate. While Grassley has indicated a willingness to reduce penalties for some crimes, he wants to increase mandatory minimum sentences for other offenses, a Senate Republican aide said. The person requested anonymity to discuss internal deliberations. That could make sentencing changes an easier sell to tough- on-crime voters, but endanger the support of lawmakers who see mandatory minimums as bad policy. “There does appear hope for a bipartisan compromise,” White House press secretary Josh Earnest said Mon. “We obviously welcome that opportunity.” Senator Mike Lee, a Utah Republican who has long championed criminal justice reform, is leading negotiations with Grassley. He’s backed by Patrick Leahy of Vermont, the senior Democrat on Grassley’s committee, & Dick Durbin of Illinois, the second- ranking Democrat in the Senate. The talks remain sensitive. During a Judiciary Committee hearing on Wed, Leahy - admitting he already knew the answer -- asked Yates, who was testifying before the panel, to restate her support for sentencing reform. “I was born at night, but not last night,” Grassley interjected. “And I know that question was in reference to me, & I want everybody to know that we’re working hard on getting a sentencing reform compromise that we can introduce. And if we don’t get one pretty soon, I’ll probably have my own ideas to put forward.”

Jason “Jay Dog” Sloan on July 12, 2015 - Roadblock the reality of the whole situation is the feds are running out of shit to try & pin on bikers so they are gonna start fuckin with us for no reason. If anyone tries to take my Cut from me that will be the day they meet there maker End Game. We put some lame ass fuck in office that is trying to take all of our rights & freedom away & he is not thinking about violating our fucking constitutional rights anarchy is going to eventually take over & then the politics won’t mean shit.

Cliff Buchanan on July 12, 2015 - Quote from Lt. Col. Donald Sullivan, If we do not eliminate the income tax, the property tax & elect all judges, we will never have any freedom. We must also eliminate the Electoral College which guarantees a 2-party system. With our 2 party system, the people will never be in control. It’s the old Hegelian dialect at work, the thesis & anti-thesis rubbing together to create the desired synthesis. The Electoral College insures this will not change. Anyone who watched the party conventions last year will recognize the effects of the 2-party system. Your vote is meaningless.

The Don Carlos Video - July 11, 2015 – Texas – By the Aging Rebel; www.AgingRebel.com - A small fraction of the surveillance video shot by the Don Carlos restaurant in Waco between about 12:35 p.m. & about 2:05 p.m. on May 17 was leaked to 65 press contacts including The Aging Rebel yesterday afternoon. The contacts include reporters & editors at the New York Times, Wall Street journal, Washington Post, Houston Chronicle, Fort Worth Star-Telegram, MSNBC, Fox, the Waco Tribune-Herald & numerous TV stations. The Don Carlos surveillance videos are multiplexed: The restaurant recorded the input from 16 cameras on one hard drive. Yesterday’s leaked video shows the view from Camera 2, which recorded activity around the front door of the restaurant & a small portion of the parking lot facing southwest in the general direction of the Twin Peaks restaurant. It faces toward but does not show the sign-up desk for the Confederation of Clubs & Independents meeting held that day. That is the portion of the shared parking lot where at least 4 of 9 men were killed. An additional 18 people were wounded. The Don Carlos & Twin Peaks parking lots were separated by a strip of lawn. The 16 camera views are: 1 Kitchen; 2 Parking Lot; 3 Loading Dock; 4 Seating Area; 5 Bar; 6 Office; 7 Hostess; 8 Kitchen; 9 Patio; 10 Patio; 11 Side Door; 12 Patio; 13 Back Dock; 14 Parking Lot; 15 Parking Lot; & 16 Parking Lot.

The Leak: The hard drive from which the leaked video was copied is in the possession of the law firm Broden, Mickelsen, Helms & Snipes, LLP. It was not sent to The Aging Rebel by that law firm but by another source using a pseudonym. As a courtesy to that source, The A-R self-embargoed the video until somebody else broke the story. TV Station KCEN announced the leak & very generally described the video at 4:29 p.m. Pacific time yesterday. Yesterday evening this page received commentary on the video from multiple sources. One source who has viewed the entire hard drive said, “It would appear that the relevant cameras are 2, 14, 15, 16 although they are redundant to a large degree. Camera 7 may also have some relevance & Camera 11 displays what appears to be Justice of the Peace Peterson.” A 2nd source said, “The video from the rest of the angles should be coming out in a couple of weeks though...none of them show much of the fight. None of us understand why this video was suppressed at all – unless something significant happens herein that we haven’t noticed yet.”

Chronology: The video is time & date stamped. The parking lot & patio in front of the Twin Peaks is obscured by the roof line of the Don Carlos porch. The view does not extend much beyond the grass median between the 2 lots. Photos taken the afternoon of May 17 show that a line of about a dozen bikes was pulling into the Don Carlos lot when the shooting started. Members of the Cossacks MC had already parked in the area closest to the registration desk at the eastern end of the Twin Peaks. Contemporary photos indicate that a policeman taking cover behind the pole that supports the Twin Peaks sign fired at least 5 shots into the parking lot in the area where the 2 clubs confronted each other. The video is mostly useful for determining the chronology of events. There is no sound. The shooting started at exactly 12:41:01 p.m. Waco time. At 12:39:30 a couple entered the Don Carlos with hardly a glance toward the Twin Peaks. Eleven seconds later 2 men in front of the Don Carlos stare toward the looming confrontation & a small knot of police is visible on the other side of the grass median near the southeast end of the Twin Peaks. A black SUV, such as Gov’t agents sometimes drive, moves from southeast to northwest toward the Jo-Ann Fabric & Crafts Store in the Texas Marketplace shopping center & toward the arriving line of Bandidos on the access road in front of the Don Carlos at about 12:40:27 p.m. One of the spectators goes inside. The other, wearing a blue shirt looks bored as he stands & watches. He rocks from side to side waiting for something to happen & then he turns to his left & runs inside.

Much Scurrying: A cluster of 7 uniformed cops runs through the Twin Peaks lot in the same direction. Two Swat officers are visible & it is obvious that there are many more than 22 cops on the scene. All of the action appears to take place at the northwest end of the lot & is invisible from Camera Two. All of the police have M-16s. They hide behind cars. One cop with a long rifle reloads at 12:48:48 & the fight appears to be mostly over by 12:42:58 although the police still seem frightened & jazzed on adrenaline. A white police SUV with its blue flashers blinking pulls into the shot at 12:43:13. A cop gets out 20 seconds later & runs toward the Twin Peaks lot in a crouch. He seems to have missed the fight but he & 3 other cops come running back 13 seconds later & 3 cops who look like ninjas crouch behind a car at the southeast corner of the camera view. They appear to be covering the main entrance to the Twin Peaks. The cops are so spooked that at 12:46:20, about 5 minutes into the tragedy, one cop appears to try to literally stick his or her head up another cop's buttocks. The video has an excellent view of those 3 cops standing there long minute & long minute. They are clearly talking to other police to the south & east of the camera. Some cops sprint. Others stroll. They clot into little groups with their M-16s pressed to their shoulders.

Reinforcements Arrive: 9 cops, presumably reinforcements, in light brown shirts arrive at 12:51:45. The fight seems over but there are still no sign of ambulances. At 12:57:58, about seventeen minutes after the shooting started, a cop carrying 2 rifles walks back to the white police SUV. He seems to change clothes then walks back toward the Twin Peaks at 12:58:47. The first customer ventures out of the Don Carlos at 1:06:49 p.m. The first onlooker with a smart phone starts shooting video at 1:08:15. Multiple Don Carlos customers come out & shoot video of the crime scene over the next several minutes until about 1:20 p.m. A man in a salmon colored shirt wearing web gear that holds what might be a camera or a machine gun appears at 1:20:50 p.m. He talks to a cop at the southeast edge of the camera view who then takes off his shirt to reveal a yellow tee shirt under his ballistic vest. The black SUV drives back to the southeast & apparently leaves at 1:21:30. People exit the Don Carlos carrying leftover containers & at 1:28:30 customers, including customers who have shot video of the crime scene, start to leave. At about 1:31:45 a customer who is shooting video of the scene is clearly told by a cop off camera to stop. A cop in civilian clothes except for a vest that says "State Police" appears for the 1st time at 1:34:04 & the white police SUV pulls away at 1:36:29. Cops in riot gear appear at about 1:44 & cops with M-16s began to enter the Don Carlos. At about 1:57 the plain clothes state policeman & another cop in plain clothes carrying a machine gun greet each other & replay the gunfight with their hands. They point & spread their arms wide. Then 1 of them leaves & the other describes the fight to an old, fat cop. The crime scene tape finally goes up around the Don Carlos at about 2:05.

What We Learned About Waco This Weekend - July 12, 2015 – Texas – By the Aging Rebel; www.AgingRebel.com - The Twin Peaks Massacre has always, clearly, been an ATF or FBI operation gone terribly wrong. The Waco police & most of official Waco have been lying about it since May 17. A couple of pieces of evidence became generally available this weekend that shine a little light into this black hole of deceit. First, it is now absolutely inarguable that at least 182 people were arrested on May 17 & that 5 of them were "unarrested" by 5:28 a.m. the next morning. In an early morning fax from Waco Detective Sam Key to lay Justice of the Peace "Pete" Peterson, Key says, "These are the 5 guys we 'unarrested.' Thanks for all your help." Generally, in ATF biker roundups, confidential informants are arrested with other suspects & then turned loose when nobody is looking.

Editor's Comment: On Very Good Authority, The 5 "unarrested" here are NOT confidential informants...

Confidential Informants: Confidential informants in numerous cases are paid around $3000 a month & they are allowed to keep everything they can steal. In multiple cases, for example Mesa Mike Kramer, the CIs are allowed to get away with assaults & murder. Their primary job is to act as agents' provocateur & solicit drug & gun buys & instigate other crimes. Some confidential informants are men who have been caught at some crime & are offered the choice of betraying their friends or going to prison. Some CIs are pros – like the semi-famous snitches James "Pops" Blankenship, Alex Caine, Ashley Charles Wyatt (who is now calling himself Charles Falco & who has been cited as a biker authority in news accounts of the Twin Peaks massacre), George Rowe, the late "Coconut Dan" Horrigan, "Mesa Mike" Kramer, James "Pagan Ronnie" Howerton & Steve Veltus. They are all loathsome men. They are all career criminals who have avoided punishment by entrapping other men who loved them like brothers. They are all men who ruin lives for a living. Since they were actually arrested, the men released in secret at dawn on May 18, were clearly not undercover agents. The Aging Rebel has been told & has reported that 2 members of the Cossacks MC took off their club insignia & put on police windbreakers & balaclavas shortly after the shooting stopped on May 17. They were probably undercover FBI or ATF agents. The Aging Rebel believes the men released on May 17 were part of an ongoing Fed investigation that exploded into violence. Based on interview with numerous sources, The Aging Rebel believes the violence was instigated by Fed agents, that it was unnecessary & that the blatant Waco cover-up that has ensued is intended to protect Fed, state & local policeman from civil & criminal liability & embarrassment.

Murder And Tampering: Surveillance footage from one of the 16 cameras at the Don Carlos restaurant, which sits across a parking lot from the Twin Peaks, also emerged this weekend. Numerous viewers of the video have complained that it doesn't show much. This morning Breitbart News headlined its account of the video "Leaked Don Carlos Video Reveals Little About Waco Twin Peaks Shooting." The video does have its moments though, & limited though it is it appears to document 2 crimes committed by police – falsifying evidence & a possible murder. The video shows that during one second, between 12:41:17 p.m. & 12:41:18 p.m., a person who is running away from the fight & who is well behind what seems to be the police line appears to get shot in the back & falls forward to the left front of a white hatchback car. He never rises during the next 85 minutes of the video. The most chilling sequence in the video begins at 1:20:50 p.m. Two plain clothes operators stand under the Don Carlos porch & point toward what seems to be the dead body. Six seconds later one of the operators, a gray haired man wearing a light orange shirt & a machine gun, walks toward the apparent body. He disappears briefly as he talks to a uniformed cop at about 1:21:07 p.m. Then at 1:21:35 he clearly & unmistakably places something on the ground of this crime scene. Then he quickly walks away. At 1:59:31 p.m. a uniformed officer walks over to the evidence planted by the plain clothes cop & marks it as evidence. Presumably, it is now part of the official case against the 177 men & women who were arrested but not “unarrested.” Clearly, the Waco police investigation is corrupt. Clearly, justice in Waco is corrupt. And clearly it is not enough for the Dept of Justice to intervene in this case because there is probable cause to believe that multiple employees of the Dept of Justice are the engineers of this mockery of the American way.

Man shot at house party – July 13, 2015 – North Dakota - By Elizabeth Hackenburg; www WillistonHerald.com - A Williston man was shot early Sat morning, & another is behind bars after a fight at a house party, police said Mon morning. Nash Wollan was charged with aggravated assault, carrying a concealed firearm & terrorizing for allegedly shooting Michael Raphael in an alleyway next to the Sons of Silence repair shop on First Street East. The 2 had gotten into a “physical & verbal altercation” at a house party nearby, according to a court record. When Wollan left the party, Raphael followed, picking up a 2-foot long piece of wood with a nail in it, the record says. Witnesses said Wollan fired 2 shots at Raphael, hitting him under an arm & paralyzing him. Following the shooting, Wollan tried to get rid of his gun, a .38 Special revolver, by throwing it down a floor drain inside the motorcycle repair shop, before hiding in the bushes, court records say. Although Wollan claims to be a member of the Sons of Silence, a motorcycle gang known for violence & alleged drug activity, police do not believe Saturday's shooting was gang-related, said Det. Lt. David Peterson of the Williston P.D. Wollan is being held at the Williams County Correctional Center, where his bond has not yet been set.

What The Video Doesn't Show - July 14, 2015 – Texas – By the Aging Rebel; www.AgingRebel.com - The video leaked last week, shot from under the front porch of the Don Carlos restaurant on the opposite side of a parking lot from the Twin Peaks, is as notable for what it does not show as for what it does. It doesn't show the 1st 5 men to die. They all died to the left of camera's field of view. The Don Carlos camera is angled to the right. The patio area of the Twin Peaks can be described as L-shaped. The front patio & main entrance to the Twin Peaks approximately faced I-35. The side patio approximately faced the Don Carlos. The registration desk for the Confederation of Clubs & Independents meeting was at the corner where the exterior walls of the patio formed a right angle. Five men, who have been widely reported to have been the 1st 5 to die, all fell out of the field of vision of the video camera. Photographs taken with long lenses shortly after the massacre in the parking lot, tend to make the Don Carlos & Twin Peaks restaurants seem closer together than they actually are. The distance between the Don Carlos camera & the Twin Peaks patio is at least 40 yards.

First Two To Die: According to multiple published accounts, the first 2 men to die were Cossacks named Richard Matthew “Richie” Jordan II & Danny “Diesel” Boyett. Both men died 5 feet outside the patio where a line of Cossacks motorcycles was parked & they are difficult to spot in published photographs taken of the crime scene. Jordan of Pasadena, TX was the stepson of an influential Cossack named Owen Reeves. Several accounts say Reeves may have instigated the confrontation after a Bandido ran over a Cossack prospect's foot. Published accounts say that a member of a Bandidos support club shot Jordan in the chest. Published preliminary autopsy results claim Jordan died of a gunshot wound to the head. Jordan fell back onto the sidewalk outside the patio, a photograph of Jordan taken less than an hour after his death reveals no head wound. Boyett lived in Waco & aspired to become a motorcycle outlaw. After his death, his brother said he had learned to ride a motorcycle only a year & a half before. A lurid account in the Houston Chronicle reported that Boyett was shot twice in the back of the head after he dove for the ground & tried to crawl to safety between 2 motorcycles. He died within feet of Jordan. Officials in Waco have made references to “Bandidos executing Cossacks” & Boyett may be the Cossack they are talking about.

Russell, Rodriguez And Campbell: The 3rd man to die was Cossack Charles Wayne “Dog” Russell, a club Reg’l sgt at arms from Winona, TX. Russell was known to the ATF. About 2 weeks before the Twin Peaks Massacre the ATF raided a location with, according to a source, “50 agents.” Among the items seized in the raid was a photograph of Russell. Russell died about 20 feet from the Twin Peaks patio next to a blue, overturned touring bike. The bike was pointed toward the Don Carlos entrance when it fell. The autopsy results released by Waco officials’ state that he died of a gunshot wound to the chest. About the same time Russell was shot, Manual Issac “Candyman” Rodriguez was shot almost within view of Don Carlos camera number 2. Russell & Rodriguez died about 20 feet apart. Rodriguez worked for H-D of Dallas in Allen, TX & he died of unspecified wounds after apparently dismounting from his motorcycle. The 5th man to die seems to have been a Cossack named Wayne Lee “Side Track” Campbell from Arlington, TX. Campbell died near the registration desk & multiple reports have indicated that he was the Cossack firing a gun from the patio. The announced autopsy results state that he died of gunshot wounds to the head & trunk.

Four Still Held - July 15, 2015 – Texas – By the Aging Rebel; www.AgingRebel.com - Four men remain in custody today in the McLennan County Jail as a result of the Twin Peaks massacre almost 2 months ago. The 4 are Michael Chaney, a Cossack from Fort Worth who is being held on $150,000 bail; Joseph Ortiz, a Bandido from San Antonio who is being held on $1 million bail; Daniel Pessina, a member of the Macheteros MC in San Antonio who is being held on a total of $123,000 bail; & Marcus Ryan Pilkington, a Bandido from Mexia, Texas who is being held on $1 million bail for his alleged role at Twin Peaks & $15,500 bail for 4 other charges in Limestone & Ellis counties, TX.

Ortiz: Officials have been coy about saying why the 2 Bandidos are still being held on such high bail. Ortiz is a former Marine with no criminal history who has lost his job & his home since his arrest. His lawyer, Jay Norton, told the Waco Tribune-Herald last week, “Ortiz is a perfect example of what is being done incorrectly up there. There was no investigation of Ortiz. It’s just guilty by association for being a member of an organization that it is not against the law to be a member of. No one has alleged a single overt act that Ortiz did in furtherance of any alleged conspiracy. He simply took cover in the parking lot.”

Pilkington: Pilkington suffered an unspecified leg injury during the shootout. His lawyer, Adam Reposo, said last week “It is terrible that this unprecedented expansion of the engaging statute which has caused the wholesale denial of constitutional protections against unlawful prosecutions & incarcerations & we are hoping that the 10th Court will have the courage to call a spade a spade since obviously no one else will, including Baylor law professors, the American Bar Association, ACLU or any of the other so-called watchdog groups who we rely upon to expose wholly illegal & unconstitutional behavior by the Gov’t.” Until his arrest Pilkington, worked as a mechanic for the Texas Dept of Aging & Disability Services. His annual salary was $12,566. His additional charges include 2 marijuana possessions, an assault & illegally carrying a weapon Pilkington’s arrest culminated a long chain of misfortune. He was seriously injured in a motorcycle wreck on July 29, 2013. He was not wearing a helmet. He was unconscious for days, broke his left leg, lost several teeth, underwent multiple surgeries, had his spleen removed & suffered brain damage. His step father died in 2014 & his wife left him & took their 3 children with her a year ago.

Philly ‘pill-mill’ doc worked with Pagan’s - July 16, 2015 – Pennsylvania - By Julie Shaw; www.Philly.com - In Jan, the feds announced charges against a local doctor, accusing him of running a "pill mill" & doling out fake painkiller prescriptions in exchange for cash & sex. Now, it turns out that William O’Brien III, 50, a doctor of osteopathic medicine with offices in Northeast & South Philadelphia & in Bucks County, allegedly conspired with members of the outlaw Pagan’s MC to illegally sell the drugs. In a superseding indictment unsealed yesterday, the feds added 9 additional defendants to the "pill-mill" case, making for a total of 11 defendants. Initially charged along with O’Brien in Jan was his receptionist, Angela Rongione, 30. O’Brien, a former candidate for Bucks County coroner, was arrested in Jan. He remains in the Fed prison in Philadelphia. Of the new defendants, 5 were members or associates of the Pagan’s outlaw motorcycle gang, which has a history of violence & drug-dealing, according to the U.S. Atty’s Office. Those five are:

- * Michael Thompson, 49, a/k/a "Mikey" or "Tomato Pie";
- * Peter Marrandino, 48, a/k/a "Petey Adams" or "Nose";
- * Joseph Mehl, 48, a/k/a "Joseph Montanero";
- * Joseph Mitchell Sr., 39;
- * Patrick Treacy, 48, a/k/a "Redneck."

Another new defendant in the case is O’Brien’s ex-wife, Elizabeth Hibbs, 54, who is accused of helping him launder money & commit bankruptcy fraud. The 88-page, 139-count superseding indictment charges the defendants, except Hibbs, with conspiracy to distribute controlled substances. The indictment also charges O’Brien with one count of distribution of controlled substances resulting in death. It alleges that around Dec. 17, 2013, O’Brien, in his Levittown office, distributed for no legitimate medical purpose about 120 oxycodone pills & about 60 methadone pills to a person whose name was not disclosed in the indictment. O’Brien at some point also prescribed 540 pills of cyclobenzaprine, a muscle-relaxant known as Flexeril, to this person, who died from the combined use of the pills, the indictment alleges. The conspiracy with the Pagans members & associates began around March 2012 & lasted until about last Jan, when O’Brien was arrested, the indictment alleges. It alleges that O’Brien dispensed & his co-conspirators obtained for resale about 378,900 oxycodone pills & about 160,500 methadone pills, & that the estimated street value of the drugs sold was about $5 million. O’Brien received about $2 million in cash proceeds from the alleged drug-trafficking conspiracy, the feds allege. According to the indictment, around Mar 2012, Mehl, a tow-truck driver, referred people involved in auto accidents to O’Brien in exchange for prescriptions for controlled substances that Mehl did not need. Mehl then allegedly introduced O’Brien to a now-deceased Pagans member identified in the indictment as "S.N." The 2 developed a scheme in which so-called patients obtained medically unnecessary prescriptions for controlled substances from O’Brien in exchange for cash, the indictment says. The "patients" then turned the pills over to S.N. & others, who sold them to drug dealers, the indictment says. Mehl recruited dancers from strip clubs, including the Oasis gentlemen’s club in Southwest Philadelphia, which Pagans members frequented, to obtain prescriptions from O’Brien, the indictment says. O’Brien would offer the prescriptions in exchange for sex, the feds contend.

As an example of how "patients" regularly got prescriptions for large quantities of pills for resale, the indictment said that Treacy "mockingly reported on the medical history form for his initial visit with [O'Brien] that he had been pregnant 'lots' of times; that he was menstruating; & that recently he had a 'PAP' test, which screens for cervical cancer." All that didn't stop O'Brien from prescribing him 240 oxycodone & 60 Xanax pills in his first visit, the indictment says. The indictment also names 3 defendants as participating in the scheme: Charles Johnson, 46; Frank Corazo Jr., 52, a/k/a "Stalker"; & Jennifer Lynn Chambers, 21, Treacy's girlfriend.

In a related conspiracy, the feds allege that O'Brien, with Rongione's aid, sold prescriptions for oxycodone & Xanax to customers for no legitimate medical purpose, charging about $250 in cash for a 1st appointment & about $200 in cash for follow-ups from around July 2012, when Rongione was hired, to around Jan 2015. O'Brien operated a solo practice under the name Dr. Bill O'Brien, LLC, with locations on Broad St near Bigler in South Philly; on Bustleton Ave near Norwalk Rd - Bustleton; in Trevese & in Levittown. O'Brien's atty, Gregory Pagano, did not return a call from the Daily News yesterday. The case was investigated by the FBI, the FDA & the Dept of Health & Human Services.

Horror Of The Day - July 16, 2015 – Texas – By the Aging Rebel; www.AgingRebel.com - When Robert C. Bucy, a member of the Cossacks MC from Midlothian, a small town southwest of Dallas, left for a Coalition of Clubs & Independents meeting in Waco on May 17, his 5-year-old foster daughter Alyssa said, "Bye, Daddy! Bye, Daddy! I love you!" Bucy hasn't seen the little girl since. Bucy was arrested following a fight there between Cossacks & members of the Bandidos MC & charged with "engaging in organized criminal activity." The legislated offense is aimed at people who break the law as a member of a "criminal street gang." There was no probable cause to believe Bucy was a criminal or a criminal street gang member. He was wearing a Cossacks cut & that was close enough for Waco – where the Bill of Rights is considered to be a kind of ivory tower ideal. Under Texas law, a "criminal street gang" is any organization the police accuse of being a gang & Bucy could be held culpable for the murders of the 9 men who died in that parking lot if a policeman, in this case it was a policeman named Manuel Chavez, said he was. At the time Chavez probably couldn't have picked Bucy out of a photo lineup. Bucy, who says he played no part in the fight that day, was held on $1 million bail. He was slandered as a "violent gang member & a particularly unflattering photo of him wearing an orange jump suit was plastered on pages & screens from Waco to Vladivostok.

Adoption Proceedongs: Rob Bucy & his wife Marilyn had begun adoption proceedings for Alyssa. She had been born to relatives of the couple in California. A year & a half ago, when her birth family could no longer take care of the little girl, the Bucy's took her in. Rob Bucy eventually had his bail reduced to $75,000 & returned home. By then, child welfare officials in California had seen his photograph & heard the news that he was a violent thug. While Rob was locked up, Marilyn Bucy was served with a "notice of emergency removal." The notice identified Rob Bucy as "a threat." Marilyn Bucy packed the girl's belongings & took her to an airport. Then Alyssa disappeared into the sky. A social worker in Texas has told the Bucys that Alyssa is now living with a foster family in California. They don't know where & they are not allowed to contact the girl Rob Bucy told Brett Shipp of television station WFAA, "It really breaks my heart. She's Daddy's girl."

Hells Angels MC Member Sentenced-Attempted Murder - July 16, 2015 - California - By Samantha Tatro; www.NBCSanDiego.com - A documented member of the HAMC has been sentenced to 5 years behind bars for hitting a 60-year-old man during a hit-and-run accident in Oceanside, Calif. The accident happened after a male patron was harassing a family of 3 while they walked past the PCH Sports Bar & Grill at 1835 S. Coast Hwy, according to Oceanside Police. A husband, wife & her father, Michael Dean, 60, walked on as the male patron & 2 others began saying inappropriate things to the woman & threatening to hit the men. Police said the family was crossing in the intersection of Cassidy & Coast Hwy, when Dean, who was within the crosswalk & using a cane, was hit by a white Lexus traveling at a high rate of speed. The driver fled the scene, but witnesses followed. The driver was identified by police as Anthony Medvec, a documented member of the Hells Angels Motorcycle Gang who is on Fed probation & required to wear a GPS tracking device. The tracking device was used to locate Medvec at his home on the 4900 block of Yuma. After a phone call from officers, Medvec came out of his home & was taken into custody without incident on charges of attempted murder. Medvec was indicted in 2012 for conspiracy to distribute methamphetamine in a meth trafficking ring busted by FBI. More than 20 other people were sentenced to time in the bust. Medvec was sentenced to 30 months, the shortest sentence of the 20 co-defendants with the same charges. On Thu, he appeared in court after pleading guilty to hitting the man with his car & was sentenced to 5 years. He faced a possible 19 years in prison.

Iron Order Lawsuit – July 17, 2015 – Pennsylvania – By www.AgingRebel.com - Acting on behalf of the estate of Tonya M. Focht, Pennsylvania Atty Timothy Daly filed suit against the Iron Order MC located at 6654 Blakemore Street in Philadelphia & Anna's Bar-B-Q Pit, Ltd. located at 4741 Penn Avenue in Sinking Spring, Pennsylvania on July 7. According to multiple sources, Focht, a student at Alvernia Univ in Reading, Pennsylvania & the mother of 2 children, was punched in the face & thrown into the path of an oncoming car as, according to published accounts, "two groups of people were fighting in the parking lot of the" Bar-B-Q Pit on June 19. After her death her fiancé, Mark Groff wrote on his Facebook page that Focht, "lost her life...because she was attacked by members of the iron order mc cop club." He also states, "I held Tonya Marie lying in their (the Bar-B-Q Pit's) parking lot trying to save her."

Preliminary Writ: In a phone interview today, Daly said he had spoken to Berks County First Deputy District Atty Jonathan Kurlin about a potential criminal case. "He told me that there would be no charges filed even though they know the identity of the man who threw Tonya into the path of the vehicle that ran her over. He also said that they were just as likely to charge Mark Groff, the deceased's fiancé, in the incident." The document Daly filed ten days ago is called a "Writ of Summons." Under the Pennsylvania rules of civil procedure, a lawsuit can begin with either a Writ of Summons or a Complaint. Suits that begin with a writ allow the complainant's Atty to file discovery requests, or requests for additional information, before filing a civil complaint. "We will need to file the full complaint in the near future, setting forth all of the details we have at that time," Daly said. "We will also add parties when we receive credible info." Daly's firm is Daly & Clemente of Phoenixville, Pennsylvania. He is interested in talking to witnesses who were at the Bar-B-Q Pit the night Focht died & his email address is tim@dalyandclemente.com ...

The Story That Tells Everyone Who the Cop-Sack Really Is... You'll Be Shocked! – July 18, 2015 – Texas – By Amy Irene White; <https://AmyIreneWhite.wordpress.com> - There is a great deal of news coming in about Waco during the last twenty 4 hours..... The first trickle from our floodgates comes from Cossack Paul "Philco" Miller, who is the Hill County Pres. He was shot in the informant induced melee at Twin Peaks on May 17th, & released directly from the hospital instead of sent to jail. Word on the streets is the ballistics on the bullet retrieved from Paul's innards was a Cop Shot. bwe are glad to hear Paul is recovering, & maybe even riding a little again, & hope he continues on his path to good health.

Now on with the feature presentation: About a month before Waco happened, several independents & various other members of the CoC were having dinner at Twin Peaks... There were no Bandidos in attendance, no wild partying or drinking... there was about ten Cossacks on the porch. When a few of the Mom n Pop members went out to the porch to smoke, there was a small altercation. It wouldn't have been all that significant if not for the players involved. Cossack Owen "Big O" Reeves & another Cossack cornered a CoC member & got really belligerent, trying to coerce him into a fight. He told Big O "man, this isn't the place to do this." Owen was more concerned with, "This is Cossack territory, take that to your fucking boss..." type behavior. In the ensuing weeks, Owen & his little friend seemed to be on a mission, privately "meeting" with various members of the CoC attempting to convince them to abandon the Coalition & making that ridiculous noise about "paying dues to the Bandidos" which of course, no one except a cop or a reporter on CNN would believe anyway. All of this, right down to the Texas rocker, is very reminiscent of a similar scene that played out with the Ghostriders & the Gator Bar & Wade Smith maybe a year ago. When you look at the comments Wade made to various people Before Twin Peaks about how he was going to "Walk in & take over a CoC meeting" & then After Twin Peaks happened, the things he said on his Facebook about Bandidos being terrorists, And since he has most assuredly pointed his finger toward the Bandidos when talking to cops in the past, it's very plausible to imagine he had his hand in this mess somewhere as well. So, our stage is almost set, right? We have almost all the elements needed to bring on the gunfight at the Waco Corral. But what is missing? Cops! Everyone knew there had to be a cop instigating this shootout somewhere at Twin Peaks... What we didn't know what the cop in question is Big O's little sidekick. That's right... there was a Cossack who allegedly was absorbed in with the rest of the Dirty Knuckles MC when THEY were convinced to quit the CoC & become Cossacks.. Who is an undercover Waco Drug Task Force Agent. He & Big O apparently had formed a camaraderie based on bullying other bikers. Whether Big O knew he was bringing a cop or whether he just thought they were causing trouble remains to be seen. Whichever is the case, the end game resulted in Owen ultimately sacrificing his stepson to be a player in the cop's game. When they headed to Twin Peaks that day, there was never a peaceful meeting planned. The Bandidos had no idea anything was going down, which is why they had a rather sad showing of attendance in comparison to the people brought in by the Cossacks. Several of the men in that club claim that they had other plans that day & were called in to Twin Peaks that very morning. They arrived in a forceful showing of numbers & soon flooded the patio & parking lot with Cossacks. Many witnesses say that the Cossacks posted themselves like sentries all around the parking lot. There was no prospect getting his foot ran over, there was no fight in the bathroom, there was no FBI operation gone bad. There was one or 2 undercover twerps & snitches on the Waco payroll all gungho in anticipation of the upcoming Steve Cook Gangbangers Ball & riding high on the adrenaline of several successful sex ring sting operations. When Big O & a few others came in, they hassled the lady helping with the parking, & a few other people as well. It was her foot got ran over as they bullied her, saying things about it being their territory. It's amazing how this particular habit is blamed on the Bandits when every story you here about the Cossacks involves them pissing on a tree somewhere. They bugged Sandra until they saw she wasn't gonna play along, & then made their way to what seemed to be preplanned positions. When the group of Bandidos rolled up that we all know about by now, the same thing happened again.. Cossacks were telling Bandidos they couldn't park there. There were words exchanged & Big O was the loudest mouth out there. When a Bandido tried to calm everyone down with a "lets settle this later" Owen was yelling. "You bet we will." All this time, many of the Cossacks are jumping rails on the porch & making their way toward the fight, or drawing their weapons. Several of the Bandidos including Manny Rodriguez & Ray Allen never even had time to step off their bikes or do anything beyond swing blindly toward his assault from the handheld, Cossack wielded weapons that surrounded them. Then a shot rang out in the scuffle... maybe 2? Suddenly cops came out of nowhere with assault weapons mowing down bikers all over the parking lot. When the fight broke out, O's friend pulled on a mask & participated. When the fight was over, he yanked off his mask & vest, ran around to the front of the building, & entered Twin Peaks as Officer Jason Matthew Barnum.

That's right... Little Mr. Red Boots has been infiltrating the Cossacks. He is also the same Waco cop who was involved in some sort of assault issue on June 29th. Meet a Cossack aka Sgt. Barnum. Oh, did I mention the assault was allegedly on his ol lady's boyfriend? Hahaha I hope he was a biker. This one fact should in & of itself be enough to release all the bikers & give their money back. How can they send in a cop to instigate trouble, send him in again to aide in picking a premeditated gunfight, then blame it on the people they were shooting at? Every weapon, every shot, every punch by a biker should now be considered self-defense in an ambush. I'm sure Jason's nads sucked up so far he could taste them when he saw his face on the first story I wrote about him. If they didn't, he underestimated me.

Unarrested Number Four - July 18, 2015 – Texas – By www.AgingRebel.com - Keith Rodgers, a 42-year-old electrician from Houston’s northern suburbs, took a nice, long motorcycle ride on May 17. He rode to a restaurant named the Twin Peaks in Waco. It was about 170 miles. It took him longer than he had expected to get back home. “I’m an independent rider,” Rodgers said. “I’ve never been part of a MC or attended a COC meeting. A longtime family friend, who is in a mom & pop club in Region 1, invited me to ride with them to the Waco meeting.” What happened next was the worst incident of biker violence in history. In a confrontation between members of the Cossacks MC & the Bandidos MC, 9 men were killed. 18 were hospitalized. Nine more were injured but not taken to a hospital. At least 182 people were arrested. Sometime in the night, 5 of them were “unarrested.” Rodgers was one of those 5. “I was mirandized but never told I was under arrest,” Rodgers said. “I believe I was released because I did not have on colors but I was not told why.” Like virtually all the witnesses to the violence that day, Rodgers “was taken to the Waco Convention Center with everyone else. I was Mirandized by a state trooper who took my statement. At that time I asked if I was under arrest & was told a decision had not been made who would be arrested. I wrongly assumed after giving our statements we would be released.” All of the statements were recorded.

Asked About Colors: “Eventually I was taken into the room where the cops were processing everyone & it became clear what was going on. There were 2 plain clothes cops processing me. I kept insisting I had done nothing wrong. Finally one of them asked about my colors. I explained I do not have any colors. I was set in a chair to the side of the table where they were asking the medical questions. I was left there for a while, being watched. Eventually he returned with a couple other detectives. One of the new guys seemed to be in charge & asked why I was still there if I didn’t have on colors. They all questioned me. The questions included why I was there, how I was affiliated with the club I rode up with & what I saw. I couldn’t tell them anything except the name of the club I rode up with. I had never ridden with them or attended any of their functions as their club is about 2 hours away from me. I couldn’t snitch on them or cooperate because I don’t know anything except the club name & the territory.” Although he did not know it at the time, Rodgers had already been arrested. He was arrested because of the way he looked & because the detectives & agents who interrogated him wrongly assumed he was a member of a MC. The detectives “walked away for a few minutes then came back & said I was going to be released. They cut the zip ties & told me to put on my shoes & wait in the room. After a few minutes a cop came & got me. He walked me out the same door I came in & put me in a van with 2 other guys. There were 2 guys in another van behind us. They drove us to a small police station north of Waco where we were allowed to use the phone to call for someone to pick us up.”

Idiot Sighting: We had to have the garage door repaired. The repairman told us that one of our problems was that we did not have a ‘large’ enough motor on the opener. I thought for a minute, & said that we had the largest one Sears made at that time, a 1/2 horsepower. He shook his head & said, ‘Lady, you need a 1/4 horsepower.’ I responded that 1/2 was larger than 1/4. He said, ‘NO, it’s not.’ Four is larger than 2.’ We haven’t used that repair shop since.

Discovering Waco - July 20, 2015 – Texas – By the Aging Rebel; www.AgingRebel.com - Last Friday, 62 days after the worst incidence of biker violence in history, McLennan County District Judge Ralph Strother gave prosecutors another 30 days to disclose their evidence in the case to defense Attys. A week before, Strother had named a Waco police detective involved in the investigation foreman of the grand jury that will determine whether the accused should be indicted with a crime or not. One hundred seventy-seven people have been accused of engaging in organized criminal activity. If indicted & convicted they all face a minimum of 15 years in prison. All of the accused were originally detained on $1 million bail. All but 3 have since made bail.

Pole Cameras: Strother agreed to release video shot by the Twin Peaks restaurant to San Antonio Atty Jay Norton. Norton is not subject to a gag order. Strother has also ordered the release of video from pole cameras installed at the Twin Peaks restaurant by the TX Dept of Public Safety sometime before the gunfight on May 17. Strother also agreed to allow defense Attys to see video shot at the scene by body cameras worn by police who were there. It is unclear whether defense Attys will have access to info about any confidential informants who might have participated in the melee; other evidence that would help explain the surveillance of the Twin Peaks; the exact “warnings” given the Twin Peaks management about the dangerous nature of the gathering that day; or an explanation for the presence of a score of police officers & an armored vehicle at the restaurant. Waco flies off in many directions. The official secrecy that has surrounded the Twin Peaks massacre for more than 2 months has given rise to widely spread, inane gossip & speculation. Every disclosure seems to invite another mouthful of bizarre questions. Example, what did the TX Alcoholic Beverage Comm know & when did it know it?

Drinking Problems: Police agencies involved in the prelude & aftermath of the Twin Peaks are known to include the Waco PD & McLennan County Sheriff’s Office; the state TX Dept of Public Safety, TABC & the TX Parks & Wildlife Dept; & the ATF & the FBI.” The morning after the Twin Peaks violence, the TABC released a statement that announced that the Commission “at the request of the Waco PD, has issued a 7-day summary suspension for the TABC license of Twin Peaks Restaurant, 4671 South Jack Kultgen in Waco. The suspension comes after a suspected motorcycle gang shooting that left 9 dead & at least 18 people wounded Sunday, May 17.” “During the suspension, TABC will work with the Waco PD to investigate whether the restaurant’s operational or management policies contributed to an atmosphere which allowed the shooting to take place. Any wrongdoing uncovered during the investigation could result in further action against the restaurant, including monetary fines, further suspension, or cancellation of its TABC license to sell alcohol.”

A List: The TABC was already studying the drinking habits of Texas motorcycle enthusiasts. For example, The Aging Rebel has legally obtained a TABC document that begins, “Beth sent me a list of known Bandidos members.” Beth Gray is a TABC officer in Denton, Texas. There are ten names on the list with birth dates & driver’s license numbers. When contacted about that list today Chris Porter, the TABC press officer, acknowledged seeing the list of names but declined to comment on it because he could not verify its “authenticity.” He added that the TABC is a “LE agency” that “has access to information collected by other” local, state & Fed LE agencies that is then disseminated through the “Texas Fusion Center in Austin.” The Austin Fusion Center is one of the places where everything gets fuzzy. Fusion Centers are the visible infrastructure of the federalization of all American policing since September 11, 2001. They are where all domestic intelligence, from U.S. Marshalls' drone flight photos collected over Texas, to cell phone data collected in Massachusetts, to data collected by license plate readers in Montana goes to hide in a cloud of secrecy & confusion. The Austin Fusion Center even has 2 names. It is at once a "Primary Fusion center" called the Texas Joint Crime Info Center & a "Recognized Fusion Center" called the Austin Regional Intelligence Center. According to the boiler plate on its web site, the Texas Fusion Center "is a 24/7 unit that works with Fed, state, regional, & local LE & serves as the state repository for homeland security information & incident reporting. It provides real-time intelligence support to LE & public safety authorities, & consolidates information & data on suspicious activities & threats from all jurisdictions & disciplines as well as the public." The Center also "supports LE & criminal justice communities by providing analytical case development, as well as strategic & tactical case support to officers regarding criminal organizations, including transnational gangs, drug trafficking organizations, & emerging threats." How all the jigsaw puzzle fit together may become more obvious in another 30 days. Or maybe not.

Waco Is Suppressing Evidence That Could Clear Innocent Bikers – July 21, 2015 – Texas – By Conor Friedersdorf; www.TheAtlantic.com - The city is fighting to keep videos of the May shootout at the Twin Peaks restaurant out of the press, & still hasn't confirmed how many victims were shot by police... Why is Waco, Texas, fighting to suppress multiple videos of the shootout that killed 9 bikers at the Twin Peaks restaurant on May 17? Why are some Attys in the case now prohibited from talking to the press? And why haven't Waco officials revealed how many of the 9 victims were killed by bullets from police officers' guns? These are the most pressing questions as 177 people await a grand jury's decision about whether they will be indicted for murder, conspiracy, or on lesser charges after attending a regularly scheduled meeting of motorcycle enthusiasts that turned violent. Attendees included members of violent-outlaw motorcycle gangs & innocuous clubs. Many members of both groups credibly claim that they had nothing to do with a fight at the meeting. An Associated Press review of surveillance footage not yet released to the public suggests that most present fled from the gunfire rather than participating in it. Over the last 2 months, motorcyclists swept up in the mass arrest following the carnage have lost jobs, been evicted from apartments, & even lost custody of children. And every day that authorities continue their opposition to sunlight in the case delays vindication for the innocents who've had their lives upended. The state loses little by dragging its feet while accused innocents pay dearly.

Worrisome aspects of the case include:

- Waco & its P.D. could be liable for millions of dollars in damages if litigants can prove that they arrested bikers without probable cause, violating their civil rights; or that Waco police shot & killed innocents. Yet the grand jury that will decide whether to indict the bikers is reportedly being led by a longtime detective in the Waco P.D. - an arrangement defended by a local judge, who declared, "If there is nothing that challenges his impartiality, he is qualified ... Who is better qualified in criminal law than somebody who practices it all the time?"

- When one of the arrested bikers, Matthew Clendennen, sued authorities, Waco's assistant city attorney fought to prevent him from getting access to video footage taken at the Twin Peaks restaurant, key evidence in the incident. While a judge ultimately ruled that his attorney must be allowed to see the footage, he barred its release to the public & imposed a gag order in the case.

- The gag order was requested by McLennan County District Attorney Abel Reyna, who is named in Clendennen's Fed civil-rights suit—and granted by District Court Judge Matt Johnson, Reyna's former law partner, according to press reports.

- Over 2 months have passed since the shooting. The dead bodies have long since been examined. Yet the public still hasn't been told how many of the gunshot victims were struck by bullets fired from police weapons. (I strongly suspect that if the answer was "0" Waco police would've said so a long time ago.)

Why is this info being suppressed? After all, evidence that is embarrassing to the Waco P.D. or that exposes the city of Waco to civil liability will presumably be made public eventually.

Here are 2 theories: One is the official explanation. Authorities say that this is a complex investigation that takes lots of time & that suppressing video evidence & issuing gag orders is necessary to prevent prospective jurors from being influenced by pre-trial publicity. I find that explanation dubious. Authorities in Waco have actively advanced a contested narrative of what happened at the Twin Peaks restaurant from the start, sometimes getting facts wrong. They haven't tried to preserve the impartiality of jurors, instead, they've pushed a version of events that reflects well on the Waco police & the actions they've taken. Here is an alternative explanation. If there is video or ballistics evidence suggesting that lots of innocent people were arrested without probable cause, or that police bullets killed some of the dead that day in Waco, it will be a public-relations nightmare & a huge liability for Waco & its P.D. Scores of bikers could sue for 6-or-7-figure sums. And prosecutors might find it much more difficult to secure indictments in the case. But if indictments can be filed before evidence inconvenient to Waco authorities is publicly revealed, the leverage changes. A biker might be indicted for conspiracy to murder, then offered a plea deal to accept a much lesser charge, like disturbing the peace, with the understanding that time served would take care of the sentence. That would be a tempting deal to take. And pleading guilty to disturbing the peace would preclude a lawsuit for being arrested without probable cause while saving police & prosecutors from looking like they harassed innocents. That alternative explanation may not be correct, but it's plausible enough to justify concern. And the change in leverage between prosecutors & criminal defendants applies whether or not it is motivating authorities.

A final question L.E. should be forced to answer, as the many criminal & civil lawsuits likely to stem from this case are adjudicated, is how many undercover cops & informants, if any, were present at Twin Peaks that day, & what role, if any, they played in altercations between various motorcycle riders. (My confidence in the Waco PD's performance was not enhanced by the news that one police officer reportedly present at the scene has since been put on leave for allegedly assaulting a Waco resident in an unrelated matter.) Scores of likely innocents arrested, suppressed video, clear conflicts of interest in the courts, & the possibility that multiple shooting victims died at the hands of police—the aftermath of the Waco shootout ought to be a prominent part of the ongoing national conversation about a criminal-justice system that routinely victimizes innocents. And by the time the truth outs, perhaps that will come to pass.
